A prairie storm-chaser said he was close by when a mile-wide tornado touched down in Moore, Okla., Monday and continues to track the storm blamed for the deaths of at least 24 people.

Saskatoon's Greg Johnson said he left the Moore suburb 20 minutes before the tornado hit.

"The reality is this wasn't just an event for Moore. Today is the fourth day of a storm system that has rolled through the southern plains — Moore was the latest one," said Johnson.

"The day before, however, the city of Shawnee, Okla., took a direct hit as well and there were fatalities — an entire community was destroyed."

Johnson is currently chasing the storm system through Texas and said people are hyper-aware about the dangers. A number of them have stopped his team, looking for updates.

"Everywhere we go people know that we're storm chasers ... (and) people want to know what's happening. They want to share their stories, they want us to either put them in a state of relaxation, that there's nothing to worry about, or let them know if there is something to worry about."

Johnson said he and his storm-chasing teammates, Chris Chittick and Ricky Forbes, would be returning to Moore over the next week or so to do further research.

City hall. Fifth person named to police board

The city's ground search for a fifth appointee to the Winnipeg Police Board has ended in success, after a previous candidate withdrew his name in March.

On Wednesday, the mayor's powerful executive policy committee is expected to pass the list of five members, the latest addition being Manitoba businessman David Kearn, president of Best Sleep Centre.

The other four are Coun. Scott Fielding (St. James-Brooklands), chair of the protection and community services committee and recommended to be the chair of the Police Board; Coun. Thomas Steen (Elmwood-East Kildonan); lawyer Paul Edwards; and Mary Jane Loustel, chair of Economic Development Winnipeg and a board director with the Aboriginal Human Resources Council.

Fielding said in March that businessman Glenn Karr, president of Superblinds and Draperies, took his name out of the running.

The Winnipeg Police Board, which was created under the provincial Police Services Act, has caused friction between the municipal and Manitoba governments.

This year, a potential provincial nominee raised concerns over the Winnipeg Police Service doing the background checks on those nominated to the board that will oversee it.

In a city press release issued last Friday, Fielding announced a compromise that will allow a third-party enforcement agency, such as the RCMP, to complete the background checks.

Peg City Car Co-op has doubled the number of vehicles in its fleet and is expanding into four new central Winnipeg neighbourhoods.

The city's only car-sharing co-op bought the four new rides with $66,000 raised by the sale of investment shares through the province's Community Enterprise Tax Credit program.

"The expansion has been made possible by more than 65 individuals who chose to support a local co-op," Shoni Litinsky, president of Peg City's board of directors, said at the unveiling of the cars on Tuesday. "With the support of the car-share vehicle, more Winnipeggers will be able to bike, walk, bus and, sometimes, drive."

A month shy of its second anniversary, Peg City has grown to include 140 members, and Litinsky said having eight cars brings the co-op closer to its goal of 11 cars and 350 members by the end of next year.

The new cars mean the co-op can build on its current locations at the Legislative Building, South Osborne and Osborne Village and expand into West

Rescue efforts wind down in suburb torn asunder by tornado

Death toll lowered to 24. Early chaos led to initial report of 51 dead

Rescue workers neared the end of the search for survivors and the dead in the Oklahoma City suburb where a rare and powerful tornado claimed 24 lives. Residents of Moore began returning home, some of them finding empty lots cleared down to bare red earth in place of their homes.

Scientists concluded the twister was an EF5 on the enhanced Fujita scale, the most powerful type of twister, capable of lifting reinforced buildings off the ground.

After nearly 24 hours of searching, Moore's fire chief said he was confident there were no more bodies or survivors in the rubble.

"I'm 98 per cent sure," Gary Bird told reporters on Tuesday.

Emergency crews had trouble navigating devastated neighbourhoods because there were no street signs left. Some used smartphones or GPS devices to guide them.

The death toll was revised downward from 51 after the state medical examiner said some victims may have been counted twice in the confusion.

By Tuesday afternoon, every damaged home in Moore had been searched at least once, Bird said. His goal was to conduct three searches of each building, just to be certain.

The fire chief was hopeful that could be completed by nightfall, but efforts were being hampered by heavy rain.

Survivors emerged with harrowing accounts of the storm's wrath, which many endured as they shielded loved ones.

Chelsie McCumber grabbed her two-year-old son, wrapped him in jackets and covered him with a mattress before they squeezed into a coat closet. McCumber sang to her child when he complained it was getting hot inside the small space.

"I told him we're going to play tent in the closet," she said, beginning to cry.

"I just felt air so I knew the roof was gone," she said Tuesday, standing under the sky where her roof should have been. The home was littered with wet grey insulation and all of their belongings.

"When I got out, it was worse than I thought," she said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

School shelters

Plaza Towers Elementary, where seven children were killed, and another damaged school did not have storm shelters or safe rooms, said a member of the Department of Emergency Management.

- More than 100 schools in the state have safe rooms, but he added a shelter would not necessarily have saved more lives.

Conservative caucus.

Some observers have painted Duffy crisis as the most serious test the Tories have faced since 2011's majority win

A "very upset" Prime Minister Stephen Harper tried to settle down a scandal-rattled Conservative caucus Tuesday with talk of accountability and Senate reform, but shed no new light on the $90,000 transaction that cost him his chief of staff.

Conservative MPs and senators heading into Tuesday's caucus meeting had hoped Harper would provide more facts behind the growing scandal that forced his right-hand man, Nigel Wright, to resign over the weekend.

But if Harper's speech — opened up on this occasion to the media, a rarity — was any indication, they didn't get much.

"I don't think any of you are going to be very surprised to hear that I am not happy," Harper said in his first public comments since revelations last week that Wright wrote a personal cheque worth $90,000 to embattled Sen. Mike Duffy.

"I'm very upset about the conduct we have witnessed, the conduct of some parliamentarians and the conduct of my own office."

Harper didn't go into detail, however, about just how involved he or his office was in helping Duffy repay living expenses he shouldn't have claimed in the first place.

Nor did he go any farther behind closed doors; sources told The Canadian Press that while MPs pressed for more details during the meeting on his office's role in bailing out Duffy, they didn't get any.

The matter is in the hands of the federal ethics commissioner and the Senate ethics officer, who can be trusted to sort things out, many suggested.

Johns wanted for human-trafficking fight

Study. Researcher says sex-buyers can play a crucial role in assisting victims

A University of Victoria researcher is seeking Canadians who pay for sex for a nationwide study. He's hoping to replace assumptions about johns with data and learn how to enlist sex-buyers in the fight against human trafficking.

Chris Atchison says he hopes the Sex, Safety and Security study will uncover the factors that go into a safe, conflict-free encounter and lead to a better understanding of human trafficking — the sale, forced transportation and slavery of people — and how to stop it.

"It seems to me that the front lines of that offensive has to include the people who purchase sexual services, because they're in the clear position to be able to report it," he said.

Atchison says a current trial in Ottawa regarding an alleged teenage prostitution ring makes it clear how important it is to develop a more accurate understanding of the people who pay for sex.

The trial includes the testimony of "clients" who, according to the Crown, offered some help to victims when they discovered the teens were being pimped out against their will.

Atchison says johns aren't without morals. He says assuming all sex-buyers enjoy paying for sex with a trafficked person who is suffering abuse would mean all johns are sociopathic.

It's those kinds of assumptions that deter johns from reaching out to police to help a trafficked person, he says.

"If they're already labelled and stigmatized as being evil, perverted ... how likely would it be that they would step forward and report abuse?"

Study. 'Suicide contagion' spreads among teens after schoolmate's death

Teens who had a schoolmate die by suicide are more likely to consider or attempt taking their own lives than those who haven't lost a peer to suicide — and the fallout can be longer lasting than once thought, a study suggests.

That effect, known as "suicide contagion," can last two years or longer, researchers reported Tuesday in the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

The findings are based on 1998-2007 data from a biennial Statistics Canada survey of more than 22,000 children aged 12 to 17 across the country.

Researchers found that the suicide of a schoolmate magnifies the risk of suicidality for adolescents, even if they didn't personally know the young person who died.

"One of the questions they were asked was: 'Have you seriously considered attempting suicide in the last year?'" said senior author Ian Colman, Canada Research Chair in Mental Health Epidemiology at the University of Ottawa.

"And that's a pretty serious indication of suicidal thinking. These aren't casual thoughts."

Firearms safety. Wireless controller lets gun owners disable weapons via phone

A high-tech startup is wading into the gun control debate with a wireless controller that would allow gun owners to know when their weapon is being moved — and disable it remotely.

The technology, but not an actual gun, was demonstrated Tuesday at a wireless technology conference in Las Vegas. It comes at a time when U.S. lawmakers are considering contentious smart gun laws that would require new guns to include high-tech devices that limit who can fire them.

The new Yardarm Technologies LLC system would trigger an alarm on an owner's cellphone if a gun is moved, and the owner could then hit a button to activate the safety and disable the weapon. New guns would come with a microchip on the body and antennas winding around the grip.

Apple on hot seat over offshore tax strategies

Billions saved? CEO Tim Cook denies report that says company uses Irish subsidiaries to dodge U.S. taxes

The U.S. Senate dragged Apple Inc., the world's most valuable company, into the debate over the U.S. tax code Tuesday, grilling CEO Tim Cook over allegations that its Irish subsidiaries help the company avoid billions in U.S. taxes.

Cook said the subsidiaries have nothing to do with reducing its U.S. taxes, a message he struggled to convey to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

"We pay all the taxes we owe — every single dollar," Cook said. "We don't depend on tax gimmicks."

The senate subcommittee released a report Monday that held up Apple as an example of the legal tax avoidance made possible by the U.S. tax code.

It estimates that Apple avoided at least $3.5 billion US in U.S. federal taxes in 2011 and $9 billion US in 2012 by using its tax strategy, and described a complex setup involving Irish subsidiaries as being a key element of this strategy.

But Cook said the Irish subsidiaries don't reduce the company's U.S. taxes at all. Rather, the company avoids paying the 35 per cent federal tax rate on profits made overseas by not bringing those profits back to the U.S., a practice it shares with other multinationals.

Apple's enormous, iPhone-fuelled profits mean that it has more cash stashed overseas than any other company: $102 billion US.

Cook reaffirmed Apple's position that given the current U.S. tax rate, it has no intention of bringing that cash back to the U.S. Like other companies, it has a responsibility to shareholders to pay as little as possible in taxes.

In effect, Apple is holding out for a lower corporate tax rate, and Cook spent some of his time in the spotlight to advocate for one, accompanied by a streamlining of the tax code to eliminate deductions and credits.

Cook, who is more accustomed to commanding a stage in front of investors and techies than facing a congressional committee, took a defensive tone with his opening statement.

RULE IS PAR FOR THE COURSE

Golf is one of those sports, like curling, that straddles the legitimate-activity fence.

To excel at golf, much skill is required. To suck at golf, no skill is required. Believe me, I know.

At its highest level, golf is an exhibition of power, grace, skill and athleticism. At its lowest level — mine — it requires good timing so you can stop for snacks between the 9th and 10th hole without holding up the foursome behind you.

Golf is also susceptible to technology. Clubs now come with an adjustable loft, so you can dial up a shot as easily as hot soup from the microwave.

And golf balls are made of flubber — if you actually hit one, it goes a long way. I've seen it done.

Push carts look like alien spacecraft with cup holders. Golf has come far from the early days in Scotland when

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

hairy, robust men used to stalk the bog with their mashie niblicks.

And if the belly putter is any indication, it's come too far.

The belly putter is a long-shafted club that you anchor (I'm not making this up) against your chest or belly, allowing for greater stability and therefore a better chance of getting the stupid little round ball in that stupid little round hole.

It looks pretty funny out here in Dufferville, but then what doesn't?

I once watched a guy take 12 shots to get his ball out of a sand trap. Then he calmly put his club back in the bag, picked up his ball, got into his cart and drove off the course, leaving his partner and the other members of his foursome slack-jawed with incredulity.

But the real problem is pro-level golf, where guys like Ernie Els, Adam Scott and Keegan Bradley have all gained a distinct advantage, and don't look good doing it.

It used to be that the biggest threat to golf's reputation was plaid pants, but as the belly or anchor putter bears an embarrassing resemblance to a crutch, it was obvious that it had to go.

As Tiger Woods so eloquently put it: "It should be mandatory to have to swing all 14 clubs."

That's easy for him to say. He actually has a swing. Most of us swing AT the ball, which is different.

So on Tuesday, golf banned the belly putter, effective Jan. 1, 2016.

Now it's up to the various pro tours and Dufferville to decide if they're going to swing free or die.

This is a hopeful sign that golf is pulling back from the brink of the absurd.

Who knows, maybe the golf lords will get staunch and ban the adjustable driver, which is kind of like having four or five extra clubs in your bag.

And once they get a firm grip on the clubs, how long before they take a swing at plaid pants?

RE: Should You Introduce Your Kids To Religion? Published May 5 online

I have struggled with religion myself. We are a same-sex family, one being born into the Muslim religion and the other into the Catholic. Neither of these religions has given us acceptance or support. We see religion as a club for the elite, and we unfortunately are not the elite. Why would we expose our child to something that is so judgmental and doesn't accept us? She will make her own decision when she is ready, as we cannot teach her something we don't believe ourselves.

Burning that silly movie money by burning some serious rubber

Car chase movies.

Fast and Furious 6 grabs the wheel this weekend but it's far from the only movie in its genre to hold the pole position

Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

This weekend Fast and Furious 6, the latest high-octane installment of the car crazy franchise, hit screens.

Along with it will come squealing tires, revving engines and some of cinema's wildest car chases.

The auto chase is a movie staple, a tradition that dates back over 100 years of movie history.

The silent Keystone Cop films featured the first recorded car chases — a mix of slapstick, jalopies and rough-and-ready stunts — as far back as 1912.

Early Hollywood often played the chases for laughs. In The Bank Dick, W.C. Fields is taken hostage by a bank robber and forced to drive the getaway car.

In the chaotic chase that follows, the vehicle narrowly misses clipping the heads off bystanders as it flies over a ditch and slowly starts to disintegrate.

"The resale value of this car is going to be nil after you get over this trip," says Fields.

Emanuel Levy, an American film critic, said, "Bullitt contains one of the most exciting car chases in film history, a sequence that revolutionized Hollywood's standards."

Lasting just nine minutes and 42 seconds, the filming of the scene took three weeks pairing Steve McQueen's 1968 Ford Mustang 390 GT 2+2 Fastback against the villain's 1968 Dodge Charger 440 Magnum.

The chase was planned to run at 75 to 80 mph but ended up racing through the streets of San Francisco at speeds of more than 110 mph.

Several years later, The French Connection made Gene Hackman a star, won five Academy Awards and featured one of the greatest ever chase scenes.

The realistic looking chase was shot without permits on the streets of Bensonhurst, Brooklyn.

The sequence got a little too realistic for one car owner.

A hapless driver, at the corner of Stillwell Ave. and 86th St., who was unaware a film was being shot, was side swiped by Hackman's car.

Director William Friedkin liked the shot and paid off the driver on the spot.

Chase sequences have gotten more expensive since the early '70s.

Gone are the days where director John Hough could stage a wild chase between a lime green '69 Dodge Charger and a helicopter in Dirty Mary Crazy Larry for peanuts.

John Moore, director of A Good Day To Die Hard starring Bruce Willis, says the chase scene in that movie cost $11 million.

They destroyed 132 cars, damaged another 518 and even flattened a Lamborghini. That one hurt, he said. "I'm a car fanatic."

Gregory Smith. Taking a Rookie run at directing the boys in Blue

It's no surprise, really, that Gregory Smith is directing episodes of the series he co-stars in, Rookie Blue. The Toronto-lensed cop drama returns for a fourth season May 23 on Global and ABC.

"He's a particular renaissance man," says Rookie Blue executive producer and showrunner Tassie Cameron. "He's one of those guys you discover suddenly that he's running some tech company out of his trailer, he's taking award-winning photographs from his travels to Africa ... he's just one of those people."

The Toronto-born, B.C.-raised actor, who turns 30 this summer, has been around TV and film sets almost his entire life. His father Maurice produced low-budget films and his teacher mother Terrea acted in some of them.

Before he was a teen, Smith was showing up on Vancouver-based TV shows such as The Commish, The Hat Squad and Highlander.

Over the years, he's also appeared in 25 films.

So when he was given an opportunity to become the first Rookie Blue cast member to direct last season, Smith jumped at it. He watched carefully the work of several directors, particularly executive producer David Wellington, studied their techniques and gave it a shot.

"That's basically how I learned everything as an actor," he says during an interview in his trailer on the set. "I was just a kid and I worked with these actors and I'd ask them questions and then something would work for me and I'd try to move forward with it."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Does Brad Pitt suffer from face blindness?

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Plenty of Hollywood stars probably have trouble remembering everyone they meet (they meet a lot of people).

Brad Pitt, however, thinks his poor memory might be an actual medical condition. He finds it nearly impossible to remember the faces of anyone he meets, he told Esquire.

For awhile, he tried being honest about his problem. "I took one year where I just said, This year, I'm just going to cop to it and say to people, 'OK, where did we meet?' But it just got worse. People were more offended. Every now and then, someone will give me context, and I'll say, 'Thank you for helping me.' But I piss more people off," the star says.

Brad says he's planning to get tested to find out if his forgetfulness is actually a mental condition called prosopagnosia, or face blindness. He has said that the condition means he doesn't go out anymore because of anxiety about the condition (and probably because he has six children).

So basically, Brad Pitt has a face everyone remembers whereas he can't remember anyone else's. Oh, the irony!

'Don't have a girlfriend,' dad advises Jaden Smith

Will Smith has clearly given son — and After Earth co-star — Jaden Smith a lot of advice, but one bit of wisdom sticks out: "Probably the best advice he's ever given me is, 'Don't have a girlfriend,'" Jaden tells E! News. "The stress is real." For his dad's part, it's less about stress and more about not closing yourself off to experiences. "Blending with another person is very difficult, and a lot of times you can lose yourself in the process," the elder Smith says. "So my encouragement to him is to be honest with anybody he interacts with. Don't make commitments that a 14-year-old can't live up to."

January Jones

Jones' baby daddy is still a secret

January Jones is not going to reveal the identity of her infant son's father, so stop asking. At least that's a lesson the New York Times learned recently while interviewing the Mad Men star. "That's my son's business. It's not the public's business," she responded. Jones apparently got the notion to keep the press at arm's length from a famous pal. "Jack Nicholson once told me, 'You should never give your personal life away, otherwise people will pick you apart. They'll never believe in your character,'" Jones explained, adding that "women should have lots of secrets. It's our right to have secrets. Otherwise, what would we write in our memoirs?"

'The pregnancy rumour is false'

Jay-Z is eager to dispel rumours that his wife, Beyoncé, is pregnant — especially since they're proving particularly tough to kill. New York radio DJ Ebro Darden reached out to the rapper via email "to say congratulations, send my love to the fam," Darden said on his show. But what he got in response from Jay-Z was pretty direct and to the point: "It's not true," Jay-Z wrote back. "The pregnancy rumour is false."

Heat up your summer with some cool Nashville vibes

Not all country. While you might think it's a honky-tonk town, Nashville is a hub for all kinds of music, culture and tasty food

life@metronews.ca

You don't have to know how to two-step to fall for Nashville. The city recently rebranded itself from America's country music capital to Music City — and there's good reason.

It's a vibrant hub of up-and-coming singers, songwriters and musicians across genres, including pop, rock, gospel, bluegrass, jazz, classical, alt-country, blues and soul. And it offers an array of cultural, historical and foodie attractions that complement its musical backdrop.

Nashville has more than 120 live music venues; there's even a live music app (find it at musiccity.com) that uses your current location to tell you where to find the nearest live music venue.

No trip to Nashville is complete without a stop at the legendary Bluebird Cafe. This listening venue has been around for 30 years, where up-and-coming musicians and the "songwriters behind the hits" showcase their talents in an acoustic song circle for fans and music execs alike. It's an intimate venue (only 100 seats), so get there early or make reservations online at bluebirdcafe.com.

Even if you're not into country music, it's worth checking out the clubs on Honky Tonk Alley — a breeding ground for young, hopeful performers. You'll hear everything from rock to alt-country and might even get a sneak peak of the next big thing.

One of the most famous, long-running honky tonks is Tootsie's Orchid Lounge, where Willie Nelson and Patsy Cline used to hang out. Robert's Western Wear is a boot store by day and honky tonk by night, where you'll hear some of the world's best rockabilly. Or check out a show at the Grand Ole Opry, which began as a radio broad-

Where to eat

The South, of course, is known for its BBQ and Nashville has its share of "dives" with "meat and three," which includes your choice of meat (fried chicken or pulled pork) and three sides. Try Urban Grub for its charcuterie board, which includes Tennessee prosciutto, capicola with bourbon-smoked paprika and toasted ancho, and Kentucky white cheddar. The Capitol Grille in the historic Hermitage Hotel features a "farm-crafted" seasonal menu with a commitment to sustainability, paying homage to great Southern dishes and cooking practices of the past — executive chef Tyler Brown uses some of his grandmother's recipes, and the ingredients are grown at a farm just five miles from the restaurant. Nashville is also home to artisan distilleries that embody the spirit of the South. Corsair offers micro batch craft spirits, which have won 41 medals at international spirits competitions. Try Insane in the Grain!, a 12-grain bourbon; for those who are gluten-free, try the Quinoa Whiskey.

Family trips

What to see this summer

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Just in time for your family vacation there are a number of attractions making their debut this summer.

Located at the foot of the Olympic stadium tower, Montreal's $48 million Rio Tinto Alcan Planetarium houses two theatres: the Milky Way theatre, where visitors study and learn about the sky, and the more interactive Chaos Theatre. Visitors to the Chaos Theatre enjoy a 20-minute multimedia odyssey through the universe.

The complex includes numerous exhibits and the largest public collection of meteorites in Quebec.

Set to open later this summer, the Ripley's Aquarium of Canada is located at the base of Toronto's CN Tower and Rogers Centre.

The Aquarium will be one of the largest in North America, hosting 13,500 inhabitants, or approximately 450 species. The facility will feature a tropical reef tank and a 315-foot-long moving walkway, in a see-through tunnel, below a shark lagoon inhabited by sand tiger sharks.

If you are looking to enjoy nature this summer, you no longer need a car to get to the front gates of Ontario's best-loved outdoor retreats. The Park Bus has added a number of new routes this summer, including Fathom Five National Marine Park, taking customers directly from downtown Toronto to backcountry access points where you can hook up with outfitters and start your outdoor adventure.

FlyOver Canada at Vancouver's iconic Canada Place is getting lots of great buzz. Housed in the former IMAX theatre, it incorporates the latest in virtual flight-ride technology and is the first of its kind in the country. Up to 60 guests are strapped in their seats and elevated in front of a 20-metre-wide, sphere-shaped screen before embarking on a virtual 4D experience across the country. The adventure showcases a mix of seasons, magnificent landscapes and vibrant colours, all enhanced by wind, scents, mist and sound.

Named after world-renowned Canadian artist Robert Bateman, and located in the historic CPR Steamship Building in Victoria's Inner Harbour, the Robert Bateman Centre features educational space, a retail store and a gallery housing approximately 130 of his masterpieces, from his classic B.C. pieces to his famed Africa collection. Check out the collection of 36 of Bateman's bird pieces where, when visitors run their hands over the painting labels, the appropriate bird sounds resonate in the gallery.

Keep the crotchety customer at bay. Wringing necks is not an option

If you've been upholding the reputation of your employer, you shouldn't be treated poorly. Chances are, your manager will know better as to how to diffuse the situation, so ask them if they could give you a hand. iSTOCK

I've always done a pretty good job of living up to my name, Rosie. Whether I'm embarrassed, nervous or just warm, I'll blush.

That's why one of my previous jobs in retail could often lead to a very rosy-faced Rosie — I seemed to get stuck with every difficult customer.

One particular incident has always stuck in my mind. I was a wide-eyed and innocent student working a sales position in a photography store and I had yet to experience such a difficult customer.

On this occasion, the customer mumbled his request to me and upon my asking if he would please repeat his question as I didn't quite catch it the first time, he yelled it into my ear. My manager had gone to the back and I was alone at the store front.

I took a deep breath and tried to help the customer with his request, which is when he started to taunt me and call me names. I cashed him out as quickly and efficiently as I could and tried to ignore the insults.

When he finally left the store, my manager emerged from the back and asked me why I was bright red with tears in my eyes and then offered me some words of wisdom for dealing with particularly difficult or rude customers:

Woe is work

"My manager emerged from the back and asked me why I was bright red with tears in my eyes."

Rosie Hales

Stay calm

This gives the customer fewer reasons to be rude and also helps you keep control of your emotions.

Don't retaliate or argue

You don't want to make the customer any more aggravated.

Try to empathize

Remember the quote: "Be kind; everyone is fighting their own battle." While it might seem that this person is trying to fight you instead, you don't know the kind of day they've had. However, if this person is just being downright rude then follow step 4.

Don't let it get you down

While it seems totally wrong that the customer might be taking their bad day out on you, chances are that if you've done nothing to provoke the customer then their behaviour is probably nothing personal.

A few months ago, a good friend of mine approached me about an internal job posting within his organization for which he was interested in applying.

He had been a video editor within this sports broadcasting company for four years and definitely needed more responsibility, a new challenge and something to give him renewed excitement about the organization and his field. He was hesitant to apply, as he'd been told that the individuals hiring already had someone in mind for the position and he felt that a fair amount of the job description was out of his skill set, as the job required producing experience. I encouraged him to apply regardless, as it would show upper management that he was looking to make lateral and/or vertical moves within the organization, that he wanted to be given more leadership opportunities and that he was looking to grow within this field. Ultimately, there was no harm in applying. His superiors wouldn't even know he was interested in the position if he didn't apply and likely hadn't considered him as a possibility for the job — not because he wasn't qualified or capable, but because he hadn't voiced any interest until this point. If you don't ask, you don't get.

My friend applied for the position and within two days he heard back from the hiring manager for the position. He had an interview three days later and, what do you know? He got the job! Two weeks later he set off on a month of travelling across Canada filming the fourth season of this station's signature show. He had new responsibilities, new networking opportunities, and the chance to learn new skills within his field — and he could not have been more pumped to get started! None of this would have happened if he had settled for the status quo and hadn't voiced his interest in this exciting new opportunity. He Spoke Up!

Think of it this way: it's more efficient and cost effective to teach a new skill to an eager, existing employee than to hire someone new to fill the gap. You'll be surprised to see the opportunities that become available to you by showing this initiative, enthusiasm and dedication in your organization.

Loud and proud

Ways to speak up successfully

- Arrange a meeting with your manager/supervisor to discuss your long-term career vision
- Talk to your boss about ways for you to get more involved in your organization
- Apply for internal job postings
- Request to be put on certain project teams
- Tell your boss you are looking for more responsibility or that you want to acquire new skills — be specific!

Opportunities to open up your yapper

Whether you're volunteering, have a part-time job, contract position, or are fully employed, it's important to speak up when you want to:

- Gain more experience
- Learn new skills
- Make a lateral move in your organization
- Get promoted
- Be given new opportunities
- Tackle a specific project
- Join a project team
- Be given more responsibility
- Take on a leadership role

Survive the post-grad phase with the Triple P

Where do I go from here? Proactivity, persistence and patience will pay off when post-graduation leaves you feeling a little gloomy

VALIENTE
TalentEgg.ca

I naively thought it wasn't going to happen to me.

My friends who had already graduated warned me: prepare for the depressing months after your graduation.

And I thought listening to a lot of inspiring TED featured talks from ivy league commencement addresses would suffice (it helps a bit).

For many architecture students, the late bloomers (I was in the same boat), they might begin to do their portfolios.

Some might get their job offers early if they prepared their portfolio on time during school and just in time to pay their student loans. Some might struggle and have a different scenario.

It's really a waiting game and it can get frustrating and disheartening at times. I tried to be positive through this experience.

Failing and falling behind has prepared me to be positive through it. A lot of students deal with this — what I'd like to call the post-grad phase.

Since many of my friends in architecture school have moved back home or moved on, myself included, this is a time I wanted to extend my network and wanted to meet people outside of architecture and learn from them. In the months following graduation, I went to entrepreneurship, leadership and architecture events to meet people and network.

I wanted to find out what success is and open my eyes to a world that is not just architecture — and I have been inspired and motivated.

It's important to remind yourself to stay hopeful, strong and to not be a victim to circumstances.

What kept me going on during this post-grad phase is the Triple P: proactivity, persistence and patience.

Stay Proactive

- And not reactive — you have to keep busy.
- Network, network, network! Attend workshops, lectures, talk to people.
- Keep building your portfolio!
- Learn and acquire new skills!
- Do competitions and join design charettes!
- Seek help — professors, career counsellors, mentors!

Stay Persistent

- There will be moments of self-doubt — you have to prevail and be positive.
- Getting hired will come unexpectedly.
- Rejection should not be taken personally — at the interview, it comes down to how well you click and fit in the workplace, and firms might not have enough projects.

Failure taught me patience, persistence and the need to be proactive. It's about carefully reflecting on yourself and constantly looking at opportunities to improve and move on.

If there is anything that my setbacks in university honed in me, it's resilience to keep going through these moments.

To climb up requires failing and learning from it — ultimately this is a career for those who are passionate about architecture and design.

To close this entry, I thought I'd finish up with one more tip — stay hopeful. This isn't an easy phase for anyone, but be positive and look toward finding what it is you are passionate about and make it your motivating push.

TALENTEGG.CA IS CANADA'S LEADING JOB SITE AND ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADUATES.

Stay Patient

- If this career is truly what you want to do and are hungry for, you'll stick with it through thick and thin.
- Our professors in architecture school were right when they said that this career path might not be the most profitable path to tread in relation to other fields — business and commerce is where it's at if you're after profit.
- Realize that this is a career of passion. Passion is what keeps me going in spite of the trying moments during this transitional phase — it's not easy, but the things you're passionate about are worth fighting for.

Smuggle vegetables onto the warm weather menu with Summer Rolls

1. To make the dipping sauce, in a food processor or blender combine the peanut butter, hoisin, 2 tablespoons lime juice, scallions, soy sauce, sesame oil, hot sauce and water. Puree until smooth. Taste and add more lime juice or hot sauce if desired, and additional water if necessary to thin the sauce to a good dipping consistency. Transfer to a bowl and set aside.

2. To prepare rolls, in a small bowl combine the rice vinegar, sugar and a hefty pinch of salt. Whisk until the salt and sugar are dissolved. Add the carrots and cabbage and toss well. Set aside.

3. Fill a large bowl with hot water. Add 1 rice paper wrapper to the water and let soak for 10 to 15 seconds, or until just barely soft and pliable. Lay the wrapper flat on the counter. In the centre of the wrapper, place a small, oblong mound of the carrot-cabbage mixture, then top with a bit each of jicama, bell pepper and snow peas. Top with 2 mint leaves.

4. To fold the roll, start by folding the right and left sides of the wrapper over the fillings. Next, fold the end closest to you up over the fillings and sides. Holding the roll firmly, roll it away from you until the remaining wrapper is completely rolled up. Transfer the roll, seam side down, to a plate and cover with a damp paper towel. Repeat with the remaining wrappers and fillings.

5. The vegetable rolls can be made up to 4 hours ahead, covered with a damp paper towel and plastic wrap and chilled. Serve with the dipping sauce.

- 1.5 oz Grey Goose La Poire
- .25 oz freshly squeezed lime juice
- .5 oz simple syrup
- 3/4 oz Prosecco

Add 3 cucumber slices to a shaker and muddle. Add ice, La Poire, lime juice and simple syrup. Shake well. Add Prosecco into a champagne flute then pour cocktail over top. Garnish with a cucumber slice.

Serve up a hot-off-the-grill taste of the Mediterranean

Taken from the new edition of the Griller's Handbook (by Broil King) this recipe provides an excellent base for grilled pizza, with options to change toppings for your flavour preference.

1. Lightly oil pizza crust on both sides using olive oil.

2. Place chicken, and vegetables on pizza dough as desired. Sprinkle generously with crumbled feta cheese. Drizzle with balsamic vinaigrette and sprinkle chopped fresh basil over pizza to taste.

3. Specially designed for pizza, Broil King recommends its Stone Grill Set. Place it in the centre of your barbecue's cooking grids. Turn all burners to high and preheat grill to 400 - 600 F. Reduce temperature to medium/medium-high to maintain a temperature around 450 F.

4. Using a well-floured pizza peel, slide the uncooked pizza onto the pizza stone.

5. Check the pizza frequently — depending on thickness of crust, this will take between 8 and 20 minutes.

6. Pizza is ready when cheese has melted and bottom is browned. Remove from pizza stone with the wooden pizza peel.

7. Allow the stone to cool completely before attempting to remove from grill.

NEWSCANADA/ BROILKINGBBQ.COM

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp olive oil
- 1 pizza crust (thin home-made or thin pre-made)
- 1 boneless chicken breast (pre-grilled)
- Kalamata olives — remove pits
- Sun dried tomato
- Red onion
- Crushed chopped garlic to taste
- 200 g feta cheese
- 3 tbsp balsamic vinegar
- Fresh basil

Lunch. Club House Burger

1. Heat grill to high. Then, in bowl, combine sirloin and ground chuck. Mix, being careful not to overwork. Add Worcestershire sauce, dry mustard, salt and pepper. Mix until just combined, then divide into 6 pieces. Shape each piece into burger about 3/4 inch thick. Press thumb gently into centre of each to form depression.

2. Brush patties lightly on both sides with olive oil. Reduce heat to medium, then add burgers and grill until meat is no longer pink, 10 minutes, turning once halfway through grilling time.

3. Meanwhile, brush butter over both sides of rolls and grill until lightly toasted, 2 minutes.

4. Serve burgers on buttered rolls with lettuce leaf, slice of raw onion, tomato and a slice of bacon, if desired. Serve with traditional condiments on side.

Roy could be Avs' next coach: Reports

Patrick Roy and Joe Sakic formed a productive partnership on the ice during their playing days, leading the Colorado Avalanche to two Stanley Cup titles.

Now, Avalanche fans are hoping they're reunited to steer the foundering franchise back to the glory days.

According to reports, the Hall of Fame goaltender could possibly be in line to become the next coach.

Roy's younger brother, Stephane Roy, posted a Facebook note late Monday night saying his brother would be the new coach. Stephane Roy later told The Denver Post: "They're discussing the final details of an arrangement."

NHL playoffs. Rangers offence sputters as Bruins move a game away from sweep finals as early as Thursday at Madison Square Garden. Only three teams in NHL history have rallied from an 0-3 hole to advance.

Daniel Paille snapped a tie with 3:31 left in the third period, and the Boston Bruins put the New York Rangers on the brink of elimination with a 2-1 victory in Game 3 of the Eastern Conference semifinal series on Tuesday night.

The Bruins trailed 1-0 heading into the third, but defenceman Johnny Boychuk tied it at 3:10 of the period with his fourth of the playoffs. The Rangers hadn't lost in regulation when leading after two periods since Feb. 4, 2010.

Boston thought it had grabbed the lead seconds before Paille actually scored when a shot deflected off the mask of Rangers goalie Henrik Lundqvist, popped up in the air and landed on the goal line. Lundqvist couldn't find it before Paille swooped in from behind the net and poked in the puck.

Taylor Pyatt had made it 1-0 in the second period for the Rangers, who were outscored 8-4 in two losses at Boston to begin the series. New York had won nine straight games at home, including three in the playoffs against Washington in the first round.

Lundqvist was sharp until the third period and finished with 32 saves. Tuukka Rask stopped 23 shots in the win.

The Rangers again failed to get their power play untracked, failing in both of their chances and dropping to 0-for-10 in the series. New York has only two power-play goals in 38 opportunities during these playoffs.

Stefan Fournier added a goal and an assist, while Brent Andrews, Ryan Falkenham and Luca Ciampini also scored for Halifax (2-1), which booked a spot in at least Friday's semifinal.

Zachary Fucale made 26 saves for the QMJHL champions, who led 5-0 after the first period and 8-2 after the second. Top prospects Nathan

The focus of the tournament now turns to Wednesday's final round-robin game between the WHL champion Portland Winterhawks (1-1) and the host Saskatoon Blades (1-1). A win for Portland puts the Mooseheads directly into Sunday's championship game, while a Saskatoon win means the Blades will go right to the final, with Halifax having to settle for a spot in the semifinal. Space out in the 2014 Fiat 500L

Review. Fiat 500 gets a makeover to become roomier automobile

wheelbasemedia.com

Fiat means business and that means making the 500 more appealing to North American small-car buyers by giving them more of what they really, really want. That's where the all-new 500L enters the picture.

Sure, the original "Cinquecento" two-door hatchback and its semi-convertible Cabrio and Abarth offshoots are kind of adorable. But let's face it; any car that's 15 centimetres shorter than a Mini Cooper is bound to be a tight fit, especially for anyone occupying the back seat. That's why the brand-extending Mini Clubman and Countryman were created and it's for the same reason that the four-door 500L will debut early this summer.

Making over the 500 to become the 500L meant employing a larger version of the 500's platform, called "small-wide." The tale of the tape reveals a gain of about 70 centimetres in overall length, about 15 centimetres in width and height and slightly more than 30 centimetres between the front and rear wheels, resulting in 42 per cent greater interior volume. You can almost hear six-footer-plus-types across the land cheering at this news.

The 500L is also somewhat larger than its nearest rival, the four-door Mini Cooper Countryman, which translates into considerably more passenger and luggage room.

Fiat has also fashioned the rear seat to accommodate three people, for a total of five (the Countryman is limited to four), although it will help if

Design

Physically, the 500L shares nothing with the 500 two-door, but it does exude a saucy character that's unmistakably Fiat. What really sticks out as unique are the 500L's double windshield pillars that are separated by a glass panel. Interesting, but there will likely be some criticism over forward visibility.

Fuel Economy

As of press time, fuel-economy numbers haven't been released, but a good guesstimate would be 7.8 l/100 km in the city and 5.2 on the highway for versions with the six-speed stick.

Engine

Fiat wisely chose not to install the 500's 101-horsepower 1.4-litre four-cylinder in North American versions of the 500L. Instead, the standard powerplant is the turbocharged 1.4 used in the sporty 500 Abarth. The engine pumps out 160 horsepower and 184 pound-feet of torque.

the meat-in-the-sandwich occupant is less than adult sized. Both the front and the 60:40 split rear seat can be folded when extra cargo space is called for.

The rest of the 500L's interior is more modernistic than that of the 500 and features twin gauge pods in place of a single multi-purpose unit.

As well, the L's shifter is floor-mounted instead of being angled directly below the dashboard. It's also a bit early to discuss standard and optional features, but what is known is that the 500L will be offered in Pop, Easy, Trekking and Lounge models. Unfortunately, all-wheel drive is not on the Trekking's build sheet, which pretty much limits where you can actually trek to.

Other up-level equipment includes a panoramic glass sunroof, enlarged touchscreen controls for the audio, communications and navigation systems and a premium Beats by Dr. Dre audio system.

Pricing is expected to come in at about $26,000 for base models but could reach into the $30,000 range when the automatic transmission and other popular options are factored in. Those are reasonable fees for an Italian-bred wagon that won't cramp your style, or you for that matter, while providing an abundance of style that matches its carrying capacity.

Auto Know. The patented Corsa design is eliminating the drone and promoting an all-round quieter driving experience

wheelbasemedia.ca

Ask anyone. Spending money on a new exhaust system is mostly about the sound. If you pick up a bit of extra power, that's just a bonus.

But it's also risky business for buyers with hundreds of dollars or maybe even $1,000-$1,500 on the line.

It took 2007 Mustang GT owner Gilles Belliveau many months to make up his mind and all the usual questions came into play. The most important, even ahead of price: will it have the right sound?

It's a very personal "style" sort of thing, and to make matters worse, buyers can't really hear, exactly, how a new system will sound until after it has been bought, shipped and put on the car. But by then there is no turning back if you made the wrong choice: you're stuck with it.

"You can listen to cars on Youtube.com with the same system you want, or hear sound clips at the websites of some companies but you just don't really know for sure how it will sound until it's on your car," says Belliveau, an investment manager who routinely takes his Mustang on weekend road trips.

Belliveau twists the key of the blue convertible and the 4.6-litre-V8 rips a tinny cackle and pops a few times before settling into a pleasant "blub, blub, blub."

"I love it. It's perfect."

Perfect sound in this case has an interesting twist. In fact, it's the lack of sound that's so impressive with this Corsa-brand system.

Cruising down the freeway in the passenger seat, you soon realize that the exhaust is not making any sound ... at all. Even less than the factory exhaust.

"It's quiet when it needs to be."

No kidding.

Crack the throttle and it comes to life. Settle back into cruise mode and there's

Quoted

"I love it, it's perfect. It's quiet when it needs to be and no drone at all."

2007 Mustang GT owner Gilles Belliveau reacted positively to the installation of a new Corsa exhaust on his vehicle just the rush of wind.

"See, there's no drone at all." Ah, yes, the dreaded five-letter "D" word.

It might seem like a small deal but a droning exhaust can become incredibly annoying as it drowns out conversation and the stereo, both of which require elevated volume levels to be heard. And pardon the pun but a droning exhaust system is just plain exhausting.

It's bad enough that you run the risk of drone — or, major drone — when you buy an expensive upgraded exhaust system, but sometimes even the factory that built your car doesn't always get it right. Owners of the V6 Camaro might know this feeling. Wheelbase Media's recent testing found the car enjoyable but that it also exhibited a tiring low-frequency exhaust drone at highway speeds.

By contrast, Craig Kohrs' kids can sleep in the back of his full-size sport-utility vehicle and not be woken up by the Corsa exhaust system.

"In fact, I'm doing 20 mph and talking to you on my Bluetooth phone."

And he's clear as a bell for this interview with no exhaust system killing the call.

Kohrs just happens to be vice president and general manager of TMG Performance Products, which manages the Corsa brand.

So, how does the company do it? Where many mufflers use a series of internal bends, baffles and packing, such as fibreglass, to muffle the exhaust noise, a Corsa system is a totally different animal.

Look in one end of the muffler and you can see straight out the other, which makes you wonder how it could be so quiet. And then you pick it up. Watch your back. The heft of a Corsa muffler is due to a myriad of small chambers that completely cancel out sound at certain frequencies. Thus, no highway

With half the job done on the Mustang GT (above) the Corsa muffler on the right is more compact and looks more finished than the stock unit. ALL IMAGES WHEELBASE drone. It's patented technology that the company has been perfecting since 1998.

Where other companies offer systems that fit certain cars, they'll often use the same basic muffler from car to car.

With Corsa, there are no generic systems as each vehicle has its own unique set of frequencies. There's even a system specifically tuned for that V6 Camaro and one for the latest 662-horsepower Mustang Shelby GT500.

Wow, that was fast.

"If we put all our resources on a project, development time is as fast as 30 days," says Kohrs.

Like most companies that think fast and sweat the small details, a tight development loop and a good product depends on the people.

"(Corsa staff are) energetic, passionate ... most of the people here love what we do ... they're into the whole driving experience."

The systems are made of high-grade stainless steel to last the life of the vehicle and most bolt in with simple hand tools.

Kohrs says that a typical Corsa system for the Chevrolet Corvette — which is a large market — can be installed in just seven minutes. None of this all-day-long business.

It took a little longer for us with Belliveau's Mustang but 30 minutes is still respectable for this axle-back exhaust-system change.

As for power, some basic stopwatch testing averaged 15 sprints in third gear from 3,000-5,500 rpm, before and after the exhaust change. The improvement was about three tenths of a second (8.6 seconds with Corsa versus 8.9 with the stock exhaust).

Regardless of the watch, "It definitely feels stronger," says Belliveau, "and the engine used to rattle and ping a bit ... that's gone."

According to Kohrs, Belliveau is just getting going as the Corsa system really begins to show its worth when intake breathing is improved, either with a cold-air intake or even with a supercharger or turbocharger.

Belliveau has plans for more upgrades but he's still wowed by a system that seems to have defied conventional exhaust wisdom.

There's just one problem. Thanks to Corsa, there are fewer stares from the opposite sex. Well, sort of. "I can't really tell, actually ... I drive by them too fast now."

Corsa have also made a muffler exhaust for the once-droning Camaro

The patented and very successful Corsa exhaust muffler design.

Change is coming, and so is a resistance to change ...

The Aston Martin CC10 Speedster. HANDOUT

Autopilot. And here's a quartette of automotive stories to back that theory up

AUTO PILOT
 Mike Goetz
 drive@metronews.ca

Here are four automotive stories from the past week that all seem to speak to how fast and how slow our world is changing at the same time.

We need to change but for some things we won't — there is this constant struggle: must change versus must not change. Probably a good thing.

Another drive-in goes down

A 58-year-old drive-in theatre in Sharon, Ont., will not make it to its 59th year. Here is an excerpt from the North York Drive In's goodbye message posted on Facebook: "It is with much regret we say goodbye to summer evenings at North York. Technology and conversion to digital projection has made us obsolete and threatens many other independent theatres."

Studios are phasing out the celluloid (or film) format. Theatres with film projector technology are going to have to go digital or go dark. While the family-owned North York Drive In decided against the considerable investment to digital, other drive-ins have made the move and are still alive and well.

Limos disguised as ambulances

The traffic in all the world's major cities keeps getting worse. Apparently the traffic is so bad in Moscow that VIPs are renting special limos to get around — those disguised as medical emergency vehicles. With sirens blazing they are able to get around the gridlock no problem. The ruse was uncovered when one ambulance was pulled over by police for traffic indiscretions and found to be transporting very healthy people in very comfy seating arrangements.

Driving Boom goes silent

A study just released by the U.S. Public Interest Research Group revealed that the post-war Driving Boom is kaput. We always thought "miles travelled per capita" would keep rising forever. But after peaking in 2004 it levelled off and now appears to be levelled off for good. Americans drive no more miles in total today than they did in 1996. Of course this is due to two demographics duking it out: baby boomers and their voluminous driving habits moving out of the picture, and the millennials and their stingy driving habits moving more into the picture. Other contributing factors are urbanization, gas prices and less need for commuting in this digital age. The study's authors suggest U.S. legislators might want to rethink plans based on the premise that Americans will keep driving until they drop.

Cool keeps coming

Aston Martin celebrated its 100th anniversary by creating the CC100 Speedster Concept. The "speedster" genre (no top or windshield whatsoever, a race-ready convertible so to speak) was selected to channel the vibe of Aston Martin's most famous racer — the 1959 DBR1. But the old-school vibe is mated to a state-of-the-art carbon fibre body and interior. Like the Aston Martin supercar, the One 77, the CC100's carbon fibre pieces are crafted (by Canadians!) in the big oven at Multimatic, an auto engineering and parts builder based in Markham, Ontario. That's about 30km from the obsolete drive in theatre in Sharon.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

The road you're travelling may not be of your own choosing but fate in its wisdom has pushed you in this direction so you would be wise not to fight against it. Worry less and life will be less of a struggle.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Others may be urging you to take a certain course of action but if your instincts tell you it's wrong then it's your instincts you must follow. It doesn't matter that you are unpopular, it matters only that you are right.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Before you get more of what you desire, it might be wise to create space by getting rid of what you no longer need. Why hold on to things you will most likely never use again?

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

What you think is a problem is in fact an opportunity in disguise. When you realize it, your mood will lighten and new opportunities will open up for you. You will soon be smiling.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The situation you face today is the same situation you faced yesterday. So why have you still not resolved it? Come on, you're a Scorpio. You're meant to be smart and decisive!

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Be careful what you ask for over the next 24 hours because you are likely to get it, but not in quite the way you expected. Come the eclipse in your sign this weekend, you may even want to give it back again.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

It would appear that you are involved in a feud and it is taking up far too much of your time and energy. Whatever it is about, you must get over it quickly. There are more important things to focus on.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Don't just assume that loved ones know how you feel. Tell them in words that make it impossible for them not to understand. Sometimes you can be a bit too cool.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

At home and at work you will get the chance to do good deeds today. Some of those who need your assistance may not be your favourite people but you'll help them anyway.
